

A power semiconductor module is presented in which terminal elements are press-fitted into openings in a plastic housing. This measure improves the reliability of the internal bonds between the substrate and the terminal element since there is no longer a risk of the terminal elements loosening in the plastic housing.

10 REL/tg

5